FAQ:

Why TB and Tetanus if my internship has nothing to do with animals?

IHR requires proof of Tetanus vaccine and negative TB test results from all interns in order to safe guard the health of both our interns and animals alike. This is true even if the intern is not in a field of study that works directly with animals, as chances are, they will still be coming into contact with the animals at some point during their internship.

What if my field of study is not among IHR's internship options?

If you are looking for a particular type of internship that is not listed here, and you would like to work with IHR, please contact the Volunteer Manager to find out if other options are available to you.

Can I internship with IHR for more than one Semester?

Yes. Due to high demand, however, in order to accommodate other applicants, IHR Management approval is first required for any such extensions. Let the Volunteer Manager know if you are interested in the possibility of an extended internship.
